We've all been screwed over in a White Elephant gift exchange at some point in our lives. The idea of stealing or exchanging your gift for something else definitely screams the spirit of Christmas. After all, one man's trash is another man's treasure, or something like that.

In the spirit of awful gifts, Houlihan's Restaurant is offering customers another chance to possibly get something better from their White Elephant exchange. Customers can submit their shitty White Elephant gifts ($10 retail or less) and will receive yet another one that's either better or worse than before. To sweeten the deal, the restaurant chain is also giving all participants a $25 gift card towards the restaurant for taking part in the contest.

So if you're dissatisfied with your gifts, send in your socks, ugly sweaters and decorative coasters to see what you get. Gifts must be sent to Houlihan's HQ located at 8700 State Line Rd., Suite 100, Leawood, KS, 66206 by January 3, 2014 in order to participate.
